 Killed or died as a direct result of enemy action – body not recovered

HMS Defence – hit by salvos and ship lost in enormous black cloud which rose to a height of some hundred feet, when the smoke cleared there was no sign of the ship. Mercifully the death by which the 900 officers and men of the Defence perished was an instantaneous one.

Ivor died in 1940 when the tram depot at the bottom of Colchester Avenue (current site of Sainsbury's) was bombed. He, his wife and daughter had been living with his sister and her family in Denbigh Street, as their own home had earlier been hit by a bomb. His mother Rosalie outlived him, having already lost her husband, her first son at birth and her youngest son Reggie at 18 in WW1; after Reggie's death she remained in her mourning clothes for the rest of her life.
